

Moving pods for storage and shifting to a new place

Are you planning of shifting in a new house within your own city across the continent or redecorate your house? Are you looking for a storage place for your belongings in the time being? Or are you interested in remodeling your entire house? If the answer to any of these questions is yes, then you are looking for moving pods.

Moving pods is a short form of moving Portable on Demand Storage. The single solution to all these problems can be seen in the name of moving pods. The birth of this service took place in January 1998. This took place in Clearwater in Florida state. Four persons with the name Peter War Hurst, David Revelia, Roy Courtney and another Bill Ash were the first people who came with the idea of moving pods.

The moving pods container are brought to the home by the customer. The customer himself fills these moving pods container. This has two advantages to it. Firstly the customers can take as long as they want in placing their belonging into the container. Secondly, this system gives the customer a complete control over his belongings placing them as he wants in the containers. These containers are kept on the ground level so that the customer can place all the material in it with ease. The company employees are called when the customer is done with the packing to transport the moving pods container to the assigned destination. The company employee use special vehicles for transporting the moving pods containers called Podzilla.

Another advantage of this system is locking up of the containers by the customers. Entire mechanism is rendered safe by this practice. The belongings of the customers cannot be tampered and secure and this gives them the mental satisfaction while transporting their stuff. Moving pods provide transportation for long as well as short distances. Ware houses are provided by the moving pods itself for storing of the containers in case the services have been availed only for keeping the material for a certain time duration.

A new trend that has emerged in the services offered by moving pods is the concept of Portable Shelter. Generators, cramped house accompanied with bathroom and kitchen suited for five persons come as a package in these portable shelters offered in the moving pods. This portable shelter comes for a period of one month generally. These shelters act in emergency purposes or as a controlling point for the entire process. These portable shelters service can also be used by people who have moved to a new place but haven't found a place for living yet. A moving truck with a storage unit is combined into a residential unit to form a portable shelter in the services. This makes the entire process easier and secure for the customer to renovate his house or move to a new place as he does not has to transport the entire container throughout the place.
