

The need for a baby pillow

Baby Pillows are used to assist newborn and toddlers get a comfortable sleep. Most baby pillows are designed to protect the child from SIDS, sudden death infant syndrome, which is a condition where a baby is exposed to choking in sleep due to their position. The new pillows not only provide a greater safety measure but also help a child develop a proper round skulls formation.

Most pillows come in cotton and polyester blend to provide a soft and washable quality to these pillows. Popular among these are the ones recommended by the American Society of Pediatricians. General practitioners and Pediatricians caution against the use of baby pillow for a baby less than one month. It is worthwhile to consult a pediatrician before selecting a baby pillow. Responding to the high demands of baby pillows, manufacturers are now providing custom built pillows on many children accessories ranging from cribs to child seats. Anti allergic pillows and therapeutic pillows are prime examples of recent advancement in technology. If confused, simply buy a pillow that seems to fit the natural spine alignment of your baby.
